Character Sketch

BACKGROUND / HISTORY / NOTEWORTHY EVENTS

Languages: Common, Illuskan

Bran Helder is a Triboar local raised in the hard-working trade-and-ranch rhythm of a crossroads town, where caravans bring trouble as reliably as coin. Triboar's lifeblood is outfitting travelers; horses, leatherwork, ironware, wagons, and Bran grew up learning that every buckle, nail, and strap might mean the difference between a safe return and bones in the ditch. When rumors spread that an earthquake uncovered the entrance to a long-forgotten tomb of a dwarven prince near Triboar, Bran didn't just hear "treasure" he heard "history," "danger," and "a job that will either make a name or end one."

NOTES

Since the earthquake, I've had the same dream: a hammer strike echoing through a stone hall I've never seen, and a word I can't read but somehow understand — OATH. The tomb isn't just a rumor to me. It's a summons. When the hill giants attacked Triboar, I realized something else: if monsters are getting bolder on the roads, then whatever woke beneath the earth might be waking other things too. I'm not going for glory. I'm going because something down there has already started walking through my sleep, and I need to meet it on my feet.

Trait: I'd rather be the wall than the hero.
Ideal: A town survives when someone holds the line.
Bond: My family's loaned gear comes home with me, or I don't.
Flaw: I don't trust 'easy money.' I assume it's bait.

Haldor Helder (grandfather) — married — Runa Helder (grandmother)
Caravan guard (retired) / wagon-road pragmatist

Edrik Helder (father) — married — Mara Thorne-Helder (mother)

Edrik: harness/leatherworker + caravan outfitter (Tough, quiet, practical)

Mara: ranch-hand turned horse trader (Sharp-eyed, community-first)

Bran Helder: Fighter "Borrowed gear" Edrik lends you a serviceable battle axe

Sif Helder (younger sister) : Apprenticed to a local merchant / ledger-keeper (knows who owes who)

Uncle Toren Helder (father's brother)
Disappeared years ago on a run toward the Evermoors / "lost on the road"
